

We study a situation where an OTF (on-the-fly) provider acts as an intermediary on the market for IT services. He wants to purchase two services that are available in different quality specifications in order to combine them to a final product which satisfies his clients' demands. We derive the optimal contracts for the OTF provider.